

THREE KILLED WHEN GELATINE EXPLODES AT SINNEMAHOING

Sinnemaehoning, Pa., March 3.—The "gelatine stuff house" at the Sinnemaehoning plant of the Grasselli Powder Company, of Cleveland, O., which is located at Sinnemaehoning, Cameron county, exploded from an unknown cause at 1:25 o'clock Thursday afternoon scattering death and destruction broadcast among the employees of the plant.

Three men were killed, two others were seriously injured, while four or five others suffered minor hurts. The dead and injured, who were all residents of Sinnemaehoning, are: George Wykog, aged 21, and single; Herbert Dexter, aged 28, single; Gordon Haynes, aged 25, married leaves widow but no children.

The injured: M. S. Daugherty and William Smith who are now on the road to recovery. There were several Clearfield county men employed at the powder works but they fortunately escaped injury in the explosion.

BONUS LEADERS EXPECT SPEED ON NON-CASH PLAN

Washington, D. C. March 3.—Bonus leaders in the House predicted today that the non-cash gratuity plan will go through Congress with comparatively little trouble. The subcommittee engaged in redrafting legislation to eliminate the all cash bonus, except for men whose compensation is $50.00 or less, estimate that within two weeks the bill will be ready. Members said they could now see no reason for undue delay, although, of course, there are opportunities for many slips between opposition and accomplishment.

CAMPAIGN ISSUES CLARIFY AS FIRST YEAR OF G. O. P. ENDS

Washington, D. C. March 3.—Democrats are seeking to make hard times, prevailing financial, industrial and agricultural conditions the big issues of the congressional campaign which is getting under way as the first year of Harding's administration closes today. Republicans are putting forward administration achievements as the main issue, notably the Washington Arms Conference with its predicted heavy saving in naval expenditures. Other important things which will enter into the congressional campaigns are the soldier bonus, the action of the Senate in seating Senator Newberry the proposed ship subsidy and amendment of the Volstead law to prevent the manufacture of light wines and beer.

POPE BENEDICT'S WILL PUBLISHED

Rome, Italy, March 3.—The Will of the late Pope Benedict XV was published today. The late pontiff wrote the testament with his own hand. It states that at the moment of his election Benedict voluntarily gave to the church all his personal possessions except some small real estate holdings at Bologna which his will now leaves to his nephew.

THIS GIRL IS VERY HAPPY

Pittsburgh, March 2.—Miss Rilla Conrad, who resides near "NY" tower on the Pittsburgh Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, will wear a new Easter hat, a gift of the railroad company.

Miss Conrad's father is telegraph operator at the "NY" tower. A few nights ago, while she was visiting the tower as a train thundered by with an unfamiliar sound. "It's a break in the rail," she said to herself. She telephoned to the section foreman. When he reached the tower Miss Conrad led him to the spot where she believed the rails had given way. A ten-inch break was found.

M'SPARRAN GETS COMMITTEE O. K.; WILL MAKE FIGHT

Harrisburg, March 3.—John A. McSparran "dirt farmer" of Lancaster county and for the last eight years head of the State Grange yesterday was unanimously endorsed by the Committee of 72 as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. By a rising vote the 58 men and women members who attended the session of the committee acclaimed McSparran as the man of the hour and the one candidate of a dozen under consideration as most likely to unite the State's Democracy for a fight against alleged Republican misrule at the election next November.

Indorsement of McSparran from the essence of the committee's work for the day. There was little, if any, discussion of candidates for other places on the ticket. On March 9 the committee is to return to Harrisburg and resume its deliberations. On that date candidates will be indorsed for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor, two United States Senators and Secretary of Internal Affairs.

Paris Editor Accepts Challenge To Fight A Duel; Gossips Aplenty

Paris, France, March 3.—Another impending duel gave Paris something to talk about today. Offended by an article in the Figaro, a Paris daily signed by Alfred Pepus and Robert Defares, the new editors, Lewis Latour, the former editor, sent his second to challenge Pepus to a duel. Defares, being a young man than his colleague, has accepted the challenge.

JAPAN DISPOSED TO RECOGNIZE THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT

Tokio, Japan, March 3.—Japan is disposed to recognize the soviet government of Russia on certain conditions. Instructions to the Japanese delegates to the proposed Genoa conference are now being prepared but have not been completed. An informant however says that the Japanese government will demand that the soviet government and that the Soviet be revivit assume the duties of the old quired to guarantee the safety of foreign property and lives in Russia.

The Difference.
The difference between a success and an ordinary man is usually this: the ordinary man is satisfied to be a second rater.

Spring's Here!

Now Is The Time To Put Pep Into Baseball Talk; Do You Want Baseball?

Now that "Spring has come" or is about to arrive and both our young and old men's fancies are beginning to turn in the direction of baseball isn't it about time for the calling of a town meeting of the C. C. A. A. and all others interested in this great American pastime for the purpose of deciding the all absorbing question as to whether or not Clearfield will have a baseball club this year.

The Progress has been importuned on this subject many times the past few days and thinks it is high time we are beginning to feel the public pulse on the subject.

GOV. ROBERTSON OF OKLAHOMA, STRUCK. PROVES A SCRAPPER

Oklmulgee, Okla., March 3.—A fist fight between Governor J. B. A. Robertson and James G. Lyons, Oklahoma oil operator, occurred in the Court House here today. It followed a confession between Governor Robertson and County Attorney James Hepburn, during which the Governor asked that he be permitted to testify before the grand jury probing state bank failures. Spectators separated them after half a dozen blows had been struck. The encounter occurred when Attorney Hepburn attempted to introduce Lyons, to the Governor. The Governor extended his hand but instead of "taking it" Lyons struck him. "I am a man" the Governor was heard to remark as he retaliated.

Charley Gulich, an old time Clearfielder, who is conducting a printing establishment in Pittsburgh, is the guest of local relatives and friends.

CAVALIERI DRAWS FOUR TO EIGHT YEAR SENTENCE

Just previous to the adjournment of Criminal Court yesterday afternoon Judge Bell called John Cavalieri of Madera, to the bar for the purpose of sentencing him upon his plea of guilty to voluntary manslaughter for the killing of Dominick Pelligi at Madera on the morning of Sept. 5th, 1921.

After reciting some of the details of the crime and commenting on the fact of Cavalieri's previous good reputation Judge Bell sentenced him to pay $100 fine and costs and undergo imprisonment in the Western penitentiary at Pittsburgh for not less than four years nor more than eight years.

Half Million Dollars In Whisky Seized In Transit On 2 Scows

New York, N. Y., March 3.—Whiskey valued at more than a half million dollars was seized by police today in West Chester Creek. Two scows brought the alleged liquor up the creek and with the arrests that have been made the police believe they have discovered a vast scheme to smuggle liquor into the country. That scows have been used for this purpose for some months is the belief of the police.

BUCKET BROKERS HIE TO EUROPE AS STORM BREAKS

New York, N. Y., March 3.—The bucket shop brokers have fled Wall Street by the score before the storm of the District Attorney's investigation it developed today. Detectives searching the financial district for men wanted on grand jury indictments have found only empty offices in most instances. Out of a total of fifty indictments only six arrests have been made. There have been thirty-five failures since January 1st, 1922.

The financial wizards and bogus stock salesmen all have folded up their gold stock certificates and stolen away in the night. Nearly one hundred detectives have been sent into Wall Street to bring back men wanted for trial. The fleeing brokers have gone for the most part to Europe. Bail has been fixed at $50,000 where the bucketers have been apprehended.

Dennison, Convicted Of Manslaughter, Applier For New Trial On Charge

Attorney A. M. Liveright has filed a motion for a new trial in the case of Com. vs. Daniel Dennison, who was convicted on Wednesday last of involuntary manslaughter for the killing of little Jackie Trumble at Chester Hill on April 27th, 1921. Fifteen reasons for a new trial are given in the petition filed. Argument on the motion will be heard at a date to be agreed upon.

$36,000 FIRE LOSS IN WASHINGTON CO. VILLAGE

Washington, D. C. March 3.—Fire originating in an over heated coal stove in a pool room belonging to Thomas Wilson in Meadowslands, near here, destroyed two buildings with a loss of $36,000. Fire companies from Washington and Cranberry assisted in fighting the fire for two hours before it was extinguished.

19TH BABY ARRIVES

Their nineteenth child, a bright and healthy boy, was born to Mr. and Mrs. William J. Daughenbaugh, of Faulkner's Addition, Chester Hill, Wednesday afternoon, March 1, 1922 at 2:30. Thirteen of the children, eight girls and five boys, are living. Mrs. Daughenbaugh is 48 years old and her husband, who is a laborer, is 52.

Millions Don't Excite Him

Rufus Coppock, fisherman, rests content with "Tipperary" in a little cabin at Plymouth, Mass., while attorneys are trying to prove that he is heir to the $15,000,000 estate of Bartholomew Coppock, consisting of property in New York, New Jersey and Philadelphia.

W. TONE EVANS WILL BE POSTMASTER OF THIRD CLASS CITY

Washington, D. C., March 3.—Walter T. Evans was nominated yesterday by President Harding to be postmaster at DuBois, Pa.

The above dispatch will be of general interest in this county, as it designated the man who will become the new postmaster of DuBois. The appointment virtually settles a controversy of a rather mild nature that has been going on in DuBois for over a year. There was a large field of candidates for the postoffice, all of them active and aggressive citizens of the community but there was always the best of feeling manifested and the work on behalf of the various candidates was always open and above board.

Mr. Evans, who is named to the office, is a young man who has resided in DuBois practically all of his life. He is thoroughly familiar with the community is a man of high executive ability and it is certain that he will make a most efficient and obliging public official.

It is probable that an early confirmation of his appointment will be made and that he will assume the duties of his office in the near future. The term of Con Allen, the present efficient postmaster, expired last fall but owing to delays in the coming here of the civil service examiners and further delays in that commission making its report, the appointment has been held up.

ILLINOIS MINERS THREATEN TO BOLT THE ORGANIZATION

Quincy, Ill., March 3.—Illinois miners threaten to bolt the United Mine Workers and make separate peace with the operators. F. K. Franklin, an official of one of the local miners' organizations said he predicted that his organization would throw the April 1st strike plans overboard and accept the invitation of the Illinois operators for a parley.

A hearing on the mandamus proceedings brought by District Attorney Arnold against County Controller Grant H. Thompson over the matter of costs in several criminal cases will be had before Judge Singleton Bell on Wednesday morning, March 8th.

OLD TIME KNOX TOWN- SHIP RESIDENT DIES

Sarah, widow of the late William H. Smith, died Wednesday evening, March 1st, at five o'clock at the home of her son, A. J. Smith of Wilkinsburg. The body will be brought to Clearfield, this, Friday evening and funeral will be held in the M. E. church at New Millport on Saturday immediately following the arrival of the New York Central train.

ROTARIANS HEAR MADAME ALDA BY WIRELESS AT LEAST THEY THOUGHT SO

The Clearfield Rotary Club meeting at the Hotel Jordan last evening was a real lively one, the Rotarians enjoying several different brands of entertainment with their dinner.

After the inner man had been properly stuffed with No. 1 Belgian Hare from Goshen township; together with the necessary trimmings, President Wilson gave Bill Wrigley the floor and Bill proceeded to announce that he had made arrangements with the Pittsburgh Rotary Club thru the Westinghouse Electric Co. to entertain the assembled Rotarians with a wireless concert. With that Bill turned the juice into the transmitter, he had placed in the dining room and at the turning of the switch a deep hase voice announced that Station O. B. P. would hold sweet converse with the Clearfield Rotarian Club in session at The Jordan. Then a squeaking voiced fellow horned in with the announcement that Mme Alda had recovered from her disposition and would favor the Rotes and all the world connected by wireless with a pleasing solo. Then the singer, of most melodious voice, broke in with her song, which was indeed a delight to listen to, its quality throughout denoting that the artist was fully up to Mme Alda's high standard. Then quickly followed several special announcements (the announcer sure did like to talk) followed by another fine song by "Mme Alda."

About this time the bell hop paged Bill and when he disappeared the transmitter choked for a minute, as though chuckling at something, then the announcement was forthcoming from the machine that "what Barnum said was right." You know of course what the great showman said one time. Further elucidation disclosed that the initials O. B. P., as the supposed wireless station was listed, were really those of O. B. Porter, chairman of the Entertainment Committee of the Club, that the "station" was located in Bill Wrigley's office and the "Pittsburgh concert" was put over on the trusting Rotes by Bill and Bruce, aided and abetted by wireless expert, J. Easton Ross, while Miss Mary Mitchell helped the good work along by her singing, which was a real feature and aided greatly in helping the jokers to get away with it.

The joke of the whole matter was that not a single member of the Club outside of those mentioned tumbled to the thing until the expose by the perpetrators.

C. Thornton Hile delivered a two minute talk on the "Duties of Rotarian" and E. W. Hess delivered a highly interesting ten minute talk on "Engineering, Ancient and Modern." The President announced that next week's meeting would be held on Wednesday evening, March 8th, and the speaker would be Edward Bach. The invitation of the Commercial Club to meet with them on April 3rd was accepted. The speaker on this occasion will be Hon. M. L. Davey, of Kent, Ohio.

$100 LOAN STARTED SOMETHING

San Jose, March 2.—When George Jones borrowed $100 for three months at 10 per cent. interest monthly on January 18, 1897, from Henry R. Stuart he did not figure perhaps the loan would lead to a judgment against him for $304,840,332. 912,685.16 in the Superior Court. "Compound interest" is the explanation.

Stuart charged Jones disappeared after the loan. He reappeared recently and Stuart sued. The Court found for Stuart, named the figure and announced it was the "only judgment it could return under the circumstances."

It took the court and two accountants two hours to figure the amount of the judgment, Jones says he is willing to compromise.

Morse and Sons Face Trial

Charles W. Morse and his three sons are among the 12 men charged with defrauding the government of millions in shipbuilding contracts. This photo, taken in the office of their attorneys, shows, left to right, two of the sons and their father, Harry F. Morse, Edwin A. Morse and Charles W. Morse.

Harvey Church, Chicago Slayer, Near Death, To Be Hung Today

Chicago, Ill., March 3.—The ebbing life of the unconscious Harvey Church will be snuffed out on the gallows at 4:00 p. m. today. Efforts to rouse Church have failed and preparations are being made to carry him to the noose strapped in a chair. Physicians have been feeding him artificially in order to keep him alive until sundown this afternoon. This is the forty-third day of his hunger strike. Doctors said he is to all practical purposes dead. Brigadier W. G. Anderson, of the Salvation Army, was at Church's bedside all day in- tending to speak to him of the hereafter, in case he roused from his stupor.

Chicago, Ill., March 3.—Harvey Church, who hangs at 4:00 p. m. today was unable to say farewell to his father and mother who visited him in his cell. The murderer recognized the aged couple as they stood over his cot. He raised up to a sitting posture and his lips framed the words "good bye" but he was unable to voice the words. Physicians believed he realizes that his death is imminent.

Uniform Came In Handy

I gave up my profession as a trained nurse after my marriage and sometimes wore my uniforms for house dresses. One day, while in the front room, I heard the back door open and close. I was alone in the house and on-going to investigate I saw a rough-looking stranger coming through the kitchen straight toward me. Presence of mind came to my rescue. I raised my hand and said, "Don't come in here, we have a scarlet fever patient." He quickly scanned my uniform and made a hasty retreat through the rear door. —Chicago Journal.

CHAPTER XIII.

Royal Blondin presently came to pay his respects to Harriet in her changed position. Nina had told her that he had been forbidden the house, in December; they had seen him only two or three times since their return from Bermuda, and then accidentally. Harriet was thankful to believe the affair between him and Nina well over. The girl was growing up now, there were other men in her world, and for the list of her eighteenth birthday party she had merely mentioned his name among others.

Three days before the garden party that was to mark the girl's anniversary Royal drifted in with the assurance that was quite characteristic of him. He rarely accepted an invitation, or waited for one. Perhaps he was clever enough to know that half his acquaintances detested him theoretically, but were glad to have him about. Nina and Harriet came in from an afternoon at the club to find him playing with languid hands at the piano, and he lazily rose to greet them. While Nina was there, his attitude toward both was pleasantly impersonal, but his suggestion, which was more like a command, that she run upstairs and dress early, so that they might have a talk before dinner, sent the girl flying, and he and Harriet could speak more freely.

"Well, Harriet, I congratulate you! How does it feel to be a married woman? I saw your name in an evening paper; of course I was delighted for you."

"Money and position don't really mean much to me," Harriet said, unencouragingly.

"Money and Position Don't Really Mean Much to Me," Harriet Said, Unencouragingly.

"My first sensation," Blondin went on, "was one of satisfaction. I thought to myself that my own cause, with Nina, was safe now. That you trusted me, and I had every reason to trust you."

Harriet looked away for a brief silence, brought her eyes to his face. She felt suddenly sick.

"Roy, you're not still serious about Nina?"

"I have never been anything else," he said, delicately.

"But—but why?" Harriet asked.

"I like the girl," he reminded her pleasantly. "I hope she is not entirely indifferent to me."

"Indifferent! She's at the age that marries anybody!" Harriet said, indignantly.

"You give me hope," Royal said with a bow.

"Her father very violently opposes it," Harriet said, after a troubled silence.

"I am well aware of that, my dear. Her father forbade me the house last December," she submitted, the girl submitted. But we made our plans. I fancy we will not have any difficulty now."

"You mean that you are engaged?"

"An understanding. We have corresponded, seen each other now and then through Ida Tabor. It's," she smiled, dreamily, "extremely romantic, of course," he said.

Harriet felt she could have killed him.

"You understand that she won't have one penny, Roy. I know her father. He won't yield. He'll forbid it; he'll not hesitate. If she does it against his will, she will have to wait three years for her money. Three years—! Roy, she wouldn't be happy three weeks! Mr. Carter spoke to me about it the only time we've spoken of you. He said that he was glad the affair had ended naturally; that you were not the man to make Nina happy, and that he would rather have her suffer anything, and find out her mistake at once, than have her heart broken, and her money wasted, through sevand watched years."

Blondin had listened to this quietly, his eyes moving from her lips to her own earnest eyes, and wandering over her animated face.

"I count on you to be my advocate, my dear Harriet," he said, after a moment's silence. "Richard Carter believes in you; he has great faith in your judgment. If you represent to him that you believe this to be a wise step all round, we shall have no further trouble."

"I can't honestly tell him so, Roy!" the girl interrupted.

"Can't you?" Blondin said. He looked across the open hallway to Nina descending in fresh ruffles and ribbons, and raised his voice. "Here she is—looking like the very rose of girls! Come on now, Nina, you aren't going to belong to anybody else but me for a while!" he said. But as he turned to leave Harriet, he added again: "Can't you? Think it over."

The girl thought it over with a maddening and feverish persistence that presently caused her a sensation of actual sickness. Vague speculations churned and seethed in the weary brain that could find no beginning and no end to them. To have made a clean breast of the whole matter months ago would have meant a delicious sense of freedom from responsibility now, but then under those circumstances would she, Harriet, have been here now? Certainly, even in the present purely technical sense, she would not have been the second Mrs. Richard Carter, nor would she have held her present position of trust and responsibility.

While Nina and her lover murmured on the terrace Harriet brooded on these things, and after dinner that evening she gave Richard so sharp a warning that he sent at once for Nina, and with a clouded brow and angry eyes briefly requested Harriet to be present while he spoke to her.

Nina came at once, with an innocent expression on her rather heavy young face. She seated herself near Harriet, and her father went to the point at once.

"Nina," he said, seriously, "you saw Royal Blondin this afternoon, didn't you?" And as Nina answered only with an ugly glance at Harriet, the betrayer, he added, "Didn't I ask you not to see him any more, several months ago?"

"Yes, you did," Nina said, in a low tone, and with a heaving breast.

"I hope, and we all hope, that you will marry some day," Richard said. "But you are too young now to make a wise choice. And until you are a little older, you will have to take my word for it that such an affair would only lead you to misery and regret."

Nina mumbled something bravely.

"I didn't hear you," her father said. "I said, I didn't see what you could do about it!" the girl repeated, desperately.

For a few moments of silence Richard merely looked gravely at his daughter. Then he clasped his fine hands on the desk before him, and cleared his throat.

"I cannot do as much as I should like, Nina," he conceded, "but I shall do what I can. But first let me ask you: have you promised to marry Mr. Blondin?"

Silence. Nina looked at the floor.

Richard repeated his question.

"Yes, I have—and you can't kill me for it!" Nina said, and burst into tears.

"Well," the father resumed, when Harriet had supplied a consolatory murmur and a handkerchief, "I'm sorry, of course. Mrs. Tabor carried letters between you, did she? You met him occasionally?"

"Two or three times," Nina said, sniffing and drying her eyes busily.

"You know my reasons for disliking him, Nina," her father said. "He is a man more than twice your age; he has a certain sort of unsavory reputation in his affairs with women. He has no income, no profession, no home; all those things tell against him. You're only a child—"

"I shall be of age Tuesday!" Nina burst forth, resentfully.

"You will be of age Tuesday, true. But you will be my ward, as far as your Uncle Edward's legacy is concerned, for another three years. Now, Nina, if you persist in this folly, against my most earnest advice, I can only forbid the man the house, and lock you in your room in the good old-fashioned way. That I shall do. I shall then give out to the world—that has already had a rare treat at the expense of the Carter family—the news of my utter disapproval of the match. If you manage the marriage in spite of me, I shall forbid you and Blondin my house, and as a matter of course use my right to withhold the payment of your legacy for three years, and stop your present allowance, and your credit with the shops. That's all I can do! And I do it, Nina," said Richard in a softer tone, "I do it to hasten the inevitable, my dear! I do it to bring you back to your father sooner instead of later; to give you only one year of disillusionment and suffering, instead of seven or eight!"

It must be a brave girl, thought Harriet, who could persist in any course, after that. But Nina had the impregnable armor of ignorance and pride, and she only sniffed pathetically again, and shrugged her shoulders.

"You do everything in the world to make my marriage a failure!" she said with the irrepressible tears. "And I suppose you'll be delighted if it is! And I don't see—if a woman can marry a rich man, why a man shouldn't sometimes be glad if a girl has money! I'm proud to help him out, if he'll let me. He says he won't—why, we had planned going—well, just everywhere, Honolulu and southern California and just everywhere, only now he won't go. He says he is going to stay right here, and take a position with an art magazine that he just hates and work it all off—before we go, if it takes years—"

"Work what all off?" Harriet asked, simply and quietly.

"This money that a friend of his really lost, but he has taken it upon himself," Nina answered, a little mollified. "It was eleven thousand dollars, and he has paid off about four, and anyway, I hate so much talk about money!" she finished, angrily.

"My dear," Harriet said, as Richard, with a troubled face, remained silent, "it isn't the money that we are worrying about. Why, ask your father, Nina! Ask him if he wouldn't write Royal Blondin a check for any sum to-day, any sum, if you and he would promise solemnly to wait three years more. You will only be twenty-one then, Nina, still such a child!"

Harriet paused, glancing at Richard for encouragement; he nodded eagerly, and she went on:

"Marriage is a tremendous thing, Nina, and the only thing that makes it right—"

"If you're going to say love," Nina broke in, scornfully, "you didn't marry Father for love!"

"I was going to say mutual understanding and respect," Harriet said, quietly, but the splendid color flooded her face as she spoke, "and you do not understand life, Nina, or men, or marriage. Royal Blondin is a charming man, and a gifted man, but he is an adventurer, dear; he is a man who has lived in all sorts of places, known all sorts of persons, accepted all sorts of queer codes. There are coarse elements in him, Nina, things that would utterly sicken and frighten you! Your father is right; you would be back with us in a few months or years, perhaps with a child, perhaps shattered in body as well as soul—not free to take up your life again with Ward and Amy, but scarred and embittered and changed—"

"My God, how that woman loves the child!" Richard said to himself, watching her. To him she seemed inspired. Her eyes were blurred with tears, her voice shaking, and she had leaned over to clasp Nina's hands, and so hold the girl's unwilling attention.

"Nina, can't you trust your father that far?" Harriet finished. "Can't you realize that a man like Royal, embarrassed for money—no matter if he truly admires you, and truly means to make you happy—can't think of you without thinking also of what your generous cheeks are going to mean to him? Write him a check for eleven thousand, Nina, as a consolation for delaying the marriage a year. Try it!"

Nina rose to her feet. Her trembling mouth was desperately scowling, and her eyes brimming, although she fought tears.

"I don't know why my own family is the first to think that nobody could possibly love me for myself!" she said, in a breaking voice. "First Harriet ruins my friendship with Ladybird—and then—then—"

"Listen, Nina," her father said. He and Harriet had come around to stand beside her, and he had encircled the shaking and protesting shoulders with his arm. "I have just telephoned Fox to make reservations for me on the next Brazilian steamer. I shall have to be a month or six weeks in Rio de Janeiro every year now. Now, I've just been wondering why you and Harriet don't come with me this first trip? We stop at the Barbadoes and Bahia; it's a magnificent steamer—swimming tanks and gymnasium; you'll love it, and you'll love a touch of the South American countries, too, a chance to try your Spanish. Why not put off this marriage idea for a year, come along with me; you'll make steamer acquaintances, you'll broaden out a little bit—"

"I won't go anywhere!" sobbed Nina, wildly, turning for flight, "because I'm going to kill myself!"

Harriet only waited long enough after her dramatic exit to give Richard a reassuring nod. Then she hurried after Nina.

The girl was sobbing on her bed, and for awhile she answered Harriet's soothing touch of voice and hand only with angry jerks. Then they fell to talking, and Nina confided for the first time fully in the older woman. Royal's letters, his exquisite cards, sent with flowers, the poems he had written her; here they all were. Harriet sympathized, sighed, and consoled her affectionately. Presently she was able to suggest a new thought to Nina, one that could not but be palatable to the girl's hurt spirit.

"You see, you're only seventeen, Nina," Harriet said, "the age when most girls are still in the schoolroom, long before they have affairs! Well, you're not interested in college, so that ought to give you three or four clear years of girlhood. You're bound to have other affairs, you've proved that! You go to South America—perhaps there is some interesting man on the steamer; you go to Canada—to California; the world is yours. Now, Royal is different. He is an experienced man of affairs; he will always have an attraction for women, and they for him. You aren't his match, now, Nina. In a few years you may be—"

"I'm not jealous!" Nina said, proudly. But Harriet smiled.

"Yes, you are jealous. You wouldn't be a real true woman if you weren't!" she accused. A reluctant smile tugged at Nina's pouting mouth. She did not dislike the idea of potential despotism, of the traveled, experienced woman of the world, confident of her charm.

"If I offered a check to Royal, do you suppose he'd accept it?" she remarked, after dark musing. She was sitting on the edge of her bed now, and Harriet was brushing her hair.

"If you really are worried about his business affairs, Nina, why not try it?" Harriet suggested, sensibly. "To this, Nina, remained a waiting."

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By "Skinney"

Here is another one of George Washington. It may interest a lot of patriotic Americans just now, very deeply concerned over conditions under the Volstead Act to hear that George Washington had tried both sides of the prohibition fence before he gained the title of "Father of His Country." It seems that George had become obsessed with a yearning for a seat in the Virginia House of Burgesses, back in 1756 and had carried his ambition to the point of entering the race—on a "dry" ticket. He was hopelessly defeated, too. The next year he transferred to the other side of the burning question, announced himself as an anti-dry and, running on an "all wet" ticket, was triumphantly swept into office, after a campaign in which it is said that rum was distributed among the voters "in great quantities."

Here is a real good one. Opposition to the soldiers' bonus on the ground that it would tend to increase idleness and would not in any case materially aid those who need it most, as expressed by Thomas B. McAdams, President of the American Bankers' Association, in a message to its members.

"The proposed distribution of $6250 to dispose of every three months nowadays would raise merry Helvetia. Giddap Napoleon."

Prof. Ralph L. Powers, of the University of Southern California says that by 1977 at the latest women will rule the world and men will do the housework and care for the children.

The reason for his belief, as stated by Prof. Powers in a lecture, is that the widespread advertisement of women in recent years has stimulated her to all sorts of activities, which have already begun to trench her as the dominant sex. She is courted in business, the politicians fear overthrow unless they placate her, and she has won first place in the news of the day. Her manifest destiny as ruler of the world is thus merely a matter of swift development.

the Rev. W. A. Crawford, an Episcopal preacher of Emmont, Md., who is against the Volstead Act and in a recent sermon in his church which he styled "Christ or Mahomet, Which Do You Follow?" said: "Drastic prohibition is not a new thing. The Turks have had it for a thousand years. The time has come when the people of America must decide whether they will follow Jesus or Mahomet on this question. They have not had a chance to vote on it yet as a whole."

"Mahomet, believed that alcoholic beverages were a curse to humanity that they were of the devil and not of God, and he absolutely prohibited their use by his people. The first public act of Jesus was to make wine and his last to order its use forever by His followers. Which was right? They cannot both be right because they directly contradict each other by sword and deed. If Jesus is right, Mahomet is wrong; if Mahomet is right, Jesus is wrong. There is no possible escape from this conclusion. Some think that if Jesus were alive, in the present day He would act differently, but this is to admit that He did not know the future and provide for it."

The reverend gentlemen contends that the proper use of stimulants promotes cheerfulness, kindness of disposition, good health and efficiency just as the improper use causes gloom, cruelty, bad health and uselessness. But since 80 per cent of the American people before the war used stimulants properly and only 5 per cent were drunkards, the net result was an immense preponderance of cheerfulness, over gloom, health, over illness, energetic action over laziness and new and constructive ideas over mental inertia.

When Dame Nature first put milk on her list of foods she was a knowing dietician. She knew that milk contained all the nutriment that was needed to maintain not only life but to build up systems that needed building up.

What Harding Has Done And Where He Has Failed
An Impartial Review Of First Year Of Harding Administration By News Association Specialist

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, March 3.—Warren G. Harding today rounded out his first year as president of the United States. When he ordered the White House gates swung open on his return from the inauguration ceremonies at the Capitol a year ago, he let in a flood of problems which have driven him at a hard pace. It has been a year filled with many achievements — The most outstanding being the armament conference — and some disappointments. Entering office after the biggest war in history and eight years of Democratic rule, President Harding found himself entangled in many peculiar problems of statesmanship and politics which have tested him and his advisors to the utmost.

Friends and enemies alike today were scanning the record of the first year closely today — to see how far Harding has gone to make good his campaign promise to bring about a return to "normalcy" for his record will be the chief issue in the congressional campaign which is already stirring to life.

While President Harding's critics insist that the return is yet to be achieved, his supporters declare that head way has been made as fast as the unprecedented economic wreckage left by the war permitted.

The armament conference which dissolved the Anglo-Japanese alliance provided for scrapping of 68 battleships and inaugurated a ten-year naval holiday, stands by common consent as the biggest achievement of the Harding regime to date.

Adoption of the budget system of controlling government expenses is accepted as the most fundamental step in domestic affairs.

International Affairs.
President Harding's first request of Congress after inauguration was that the Knox peace resolution be adopted to end the anomalous situation created by the rejection of the Versailles treaty. This resolution adopted by the extra session of congress called chiefly for that purpose, was signed July 2nd by President Harding. Negotiations and ratification of separate treaties with the Central powers preserving to the United States all rights to which it would have been entitled by ratification of the Versailles treaty followed.

The decks thus cleared of the last wreckage of the war, President Harding began quiet feelers which led to the call for the conference on limitation of armament which brought representatives of the five leading world powers to Washington for three months conference to reduce the burden of naval armament, restrict use of submarines and poisonous gases in war, and adjust troublesome questions in the Far East, including Shantung and the open door in China.

Other developments in the field of foreign affairs during the year include: Ratification of the Columbian treaty awarding $25,000,000 damages growing out of the Panama revolution during the Roosevelt administration. Settlement of the Panama Costa Rican boundary dispute by diplomatic pressure and dispatch of marines that forced Panama to yield her claims. Negotiation of a treaty with Japan defining American rights in Yap. Invitation to Chile and Peru to hold conference in Washington for settlement of Tagna-Arica boundary dispute.

Proposal of treaty with Mexico to insure protection of American rights as a condition of recognition. Appropriation of $20,000,000 for famine relief in Russia.

Domestic Legislation
Immediately after inauguration President Harding called an extra session of congress to adopt a resolution of peace with Germany and to enact emergency tariff legislation. As this session merged into the regular session early in December, Congress has been almost continuously at work since Harding assumed office, turning out a steady stream of laws. The more important legislation included:

- Emergency tariff act providing greater protection for farm products and other commodities.
- Revised tax law repealing the excess profits levies, scaling down the income surtaxes and abolishing "nuisance" taxes.
- Restriction of immigration.
- Budget System.
- Regulation of grain exchanges.
- Regulation of meat packing industry.
- Establishment of Veteran's Service Bureau.
- Maternity aid.
- Creation of agricultural credit revolving fund of $1,000,000 to be administered through War Finance Corporation.
- Anti-beer bill, prohibiting prescribing of beer for medicinal purposes and further tightening prohibition enforcement.
- Appropriation of $75,000,000 to aid road building.
- Reorganization of Indian Bureau.
- Authorization to complete Alaskan Railroad.
- Allied debt refunding bill providing commission to negotiate for payment of war loans.
- Appropriation of $25,000,000 for Russian famine relief.
- Measure to encourage cooperative marketing among farmers.
- Placing of an additional member on Federal Reserve board with understanding that he will represent agriculture.

standing that he will represent agriculture.

Several other important pieces of legislation have passed only one house such as the Panama Canal free toll bill now shelved in the House; the permanent tariff bill now in the Senate finance committee and the $500,000,000 railroad relief bill.

Harding's path has been stormy in spots and there are many squalls still in sight due to difference in viewpoint between the White House and the Capitol. The most ominous of these is the bonus issue which has raised the widest breach between the opposite arms of the government.

Harding's efforts to form a plan for reorganizing government departments in a sweeping way has also met opposition, thus far, largely from the cabinet members, who are reluctant to allow any of their bureaus to be transferred to other departments. Congressional opposition is likely to be even more aggressive when the proposals reach Capitol Hill.

Plans for the ship subsidy to build up a merchant marine with the aid of money from the Federal Treasury are expected to develop a hot fight within the party in Congress.

Neon's Peculiar Property.
Neon, one of the rarest elements of the air, has the peculiar characteristic of glowing bright red when an electric current passes through it, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. This has been utilized in a new spark plug tester, consisting of a hard rubber shell that contains a small glass tube of neon. When the metal cup, sealing the tube, touches a spark plug, the action of the neon quickly shows whether the plug is working or not.

Snowflakes All Hexagonal.
One of the odd facts in connection with snow crystals is that practically all of the hundreds of different varieties are hexagonal in form.

Always.
Women make fine distinctions. It's all right to call them visions, but mighty dangerous to call them slights.

Current Business Conditions
By GEORGE E. ROBERTS
(From the Monthly Bulletin Issued by The National City Bank of New York for March)

THE rise in farm products during February is of greater significance than any other development that has occurred since these prices broke in the fall of 1920. The dead-lock, which has existed as a result of farm products falling faster and farther than other products, has been broken and the change has brightened the business situation. As is usually the case when a great fall of prices occurs under conditions which unsettle confidence, farm products fell below the normal level and in some instances below the pre-war level.

Survey of Agricultural Staples
Wheat has had a rise of 40 cents a bushel from the low point, and should bring a good price as long as Russia is not an exporter. Hogs at $10 per hundred weight in Chicago are on a profitable basis, and helped corn. Stock cattle are doing much better. During the boom period while prices were rising, many cattlemen became over-tended, and in many instances banks became over-extended in granting them accommodations. A great amount of cattle paper was put afloat through cattle-loan companies, and bought by investors who were under no obligations to renew it, and who counted upon having the money when the paper fell due. The turn of the times came, prices fell, bank deposits declined, the cattle loans fell due, banks needed their money to meet the calls of depositors, and cattle had to be sold. It was a mistake to create so much indebtedness. The cattle business would have had more real prosperity without borrowing so much. The borrowing resulted in a competition for stock cattle that drove prices up to a level that was dangerous for those who did the financing and ultimately brought disaster all around. The excessive supplies of cotton are being steadily reduced, and the price has advanced two cents from the low point of January.

The Business Outlook
It will be seen from the foregoing survey of the agricultural staples that a pronounced improvement has taken place in the position of the farming population, which is precisely where the business situation has been weak. It probably is safe to say that the worst has been passed, and that on the whole the farmer will not lose the ground that has been gained.

For one thing, a rise such as has occurred does much to restore confidence in values. It has shown how easily the situation may right itself with a slight change in conditions, and that there never was ground for the extreme pessimism that prevailed. Pessimism, like optimism, is infectious, and when everybody is thinking the same way either state of mind will run to the extreme. When times were booming, common opinion was ready to insist they would go on that way for a long time, and when they turned bad it was just as positive that they were going to stay bad for a very long time unless something was done, forthwith.

It would be a mistake to think prices are going back to war figures. In Europe, outside of Russia, agriculture will be back in 1922 almost to normal productivity, and it will buy no more outside of Europe than it is obliged to. A return to completely normal conditions is not to be expected until the finances of Europe are in better shape. In the long run the farmer has one permanent influence on his side. The population is constantly increasing and the area of land in farms increases now only by a considerable expenditure of capital, for irrigation, drainage or the improvement of cut over lands.

The Wage Question
This rally of farm products by no means alters the balance between farm products and the goods and services which the farmer must buy. It helps, but the latter must come down before employment can be full for the wage earners or business normal for anybody. Inexcusable Economic Law is exerting steady pressure upon this side of the equation as well as upon the other. The money strike against wages continues in New England, the operators having declined to arbitrate the question, for a reason which there is every reason to believe is well-founded, and if so is unanswerable. They say that if they entered into arbitration they would feel bound to operate the mills at the wage fixed by the arbitrators, but that any wage-scale above the one they have offered would place their costs above present selling values, and make it impossible for them to give regular employment. They urge that a reduction of manufacturing costs is necessary to enable the goods to be marketed.

The situation is the same as to bituminous coal. The non-union miners have reduced wage-rates and the result is that the former are running practically full time and the miners in them are making higher wages per week than the union miners. Many union miners who have nothing to do have gone over to the non-union districts and accepted work there, thus expanding the output. The union leaders are urging the state of stagnation in the industry as the chief argument for maintaining the high wage-rates, but high wage-rates and high prices for coal are among the chief causes of business stagnation.

Railroad employees have taken a reduction of about 12 per cent, but their pay is still out of reasonable proportion to that of services in other occupations. Mr. William Butterworth, President of Deere & Company, Moline, Illinois, manufacturer of agricultural implements, writes to the "Nation's Business" as follows:

"In my factory at Moline a machine operator gets from 35 cents to 58 cents an hour, according to his efficiency and his length of service. His next-door neighbor, maybe, is classed as a machine operator in the railroad shops at Moline, and he receives for work of the same grade or lower, whatever his term of service and without regard to special efficiency, 77 cents an hour. The poorest workman of that class receives from the railroads 42 cents an hour more than my inexperienced workman, and 19 cents an hour more than my best. You may imagine the consequence of this disparity on labor generally.

"A common day laborer in the railroad shop gets 43 cents an hour whereas my best unskilled workmen get but 39 cents. The common day laborer for the railroad gets more than my best-paid machinist's helper or a semi-skilled and ambitious operator."

It may be answered that Deere & Company should raise wages to conform to the pay of railroad employees, but Deere & Company lost about $9,409,733 in their business last year, of which $6,317,059 represented a writing down of inventories to correspond to the decline in price of materials and stock on hand, and $2,752,901 represented loss on goods sold. This was due to the general decline of prices and to the inability of farmers to buy implements. Other manufacturers of implements fared likewise. This shows anything but a healthy state of industry. The wage-earning class will not prosper when the farmers cannot buy implements, for that means that they will buy very little of any manufactured goods.

The Deere report to stockholders states that sales in 1921 were only 37 per cent of what they were in 1920, and that it was necessary to make radical reductions throughout the organization. The factories with one exception were closed in the late Winter and Spring of 1921 and remained closed throughout the remainder of the year. That tells how present conditions affect the employees of Deere & Company.

The continuation of this situation is largely due to railroad charges that are excessively high in their relation to the value of the freight carried, particularly in the case of farm products and other bulky materials. In the iron and steel industry five tons of incoming materials are required to make a ton of product, and the increase in freight charges more than accounts for the difference between the prices of the principal products now and before the war. Railroad charges cannot be reduced unless operating costs are reduced, and the wages of railroad employees and cost of coal are the principal items in railroad expenditures.

CURWENSVILLE

On Tuesday morning at chapel David McKinley was presented with the five dollar gold piece won in the spelling contest conducted in the high school last Friday afternoon. Mr. Reuben Robinson, one of our public spirited citizens, had offered ten dollars in gold to any one of the schools who would spell all of the two hundred words submitted and five dollars in gold to any one of the schools who would make the highest mark in the contest. Out of the two hundred words, David McKinley missed by 24. This was considered a splendid record by all those who knew the conditions under which the words were submitted. It was necessary to pronounce them rapidly; the words were difficult; and the tendency to fatigue on so many words all mitigated against a high average. The senior class made an average of 77 per cent.

Following are the words:

Separate, aisle, symmetrical, receive, relief, disappointment, committee, bounteous, remembrance, vagueness, reconcile, science, synonym, recognize, memoir, leggings, fiasco, nuzzle, dactyl, hiccup, diphtheria, penitentiary, Punsutaweddy, encyclopedia, exaggerate, fluctuate, wye, gnu, indecisive, decision, characteristic, isthmus, paraphernalia, delinquent, whether, conspicuous, discrimination, harass, appraise, heliotrope, discern, commissioner, judicious, efficient, voracious, orthopedic, acknowledge, carnivorous, ambiguous, diocese, religious, pharmaceuticals, arctic, inoculate, neurulgia, incendiary, maximum, consensus, mysterious, mutilate, scion, peritonitis, misconstrue, catarrh, dachshund, Cincinnati, chloroform, psychological, sieve, declension, hypodermic, expostulate, crucial, geography, physiology, collateral, silhouette, government, catechism, witticism, esophagus, hydrophobia, preeminent, Tallahassee, Arkansas, dysentery, centipede, precise, knuckle, callous, barometer, corroborate, Worcester, Missouri, commutation, sanguinary, genuine, coordinate, distillery, miscellaneous, genius, ingenuity, octogenarian, lymnaeic, Mediterranean, syllable, picturesque, bivouac, pseudonym, susceptible, xylophone, celebrity, troussau, rendezvous, pneumonia, fallacious, fictitious, epileptic, crystallize, solder, Connecticut, Massachusetts, parallel, shellac, phosphorescence, circumspect, pertinacious, persuasion, perpetual, assuage, accent, asphyxiate, asafetida, indulgence, intelligence, procrastinate, recognition, incongruous, incipient, incessant, incomprehensible, incombustible, emembrance, ecclesiastical, indemnify, quadruple, quantity, scissars, rhapsody, sophisticated, sleuth, belligerent, deceit, pretext, daffodil, effervescent, descend, mitigate, patriarchate, recommend, recede, illuminate, instantaneous, congeal, chrysanthemum, precipice, ptomaine, incredulous, discrepancy, ejaculate, sciatie, exchilliate, exonerate, extemporaneous, accordian, specify, acrimonious, phenomenal, acquiescent, achievement, grotesque, antique, superficial, chthonian, articulating, ponderosity, velopede, diaphragm, reindeer, vane, exchequer, icicle, recipient, rhetorical, necessary, practice, criticise, philosopher, extraordinary, erysipelas.

British Army "Swagger."
It has been said that the English army authorities once issued an order that officers should not wear eyeglasses or spectacles, these being considered evidence of defective sight. A number of army officers then took to wearing the monocle, disobeying the army order by a safe margin and giving to themselves, as it was thought at the time, an air of distinction, the thought being something like that which prompted so many officers and enlisted men to carry a short cane which came to be called a "swagger stick."

Says Uncle Eben.
"Dar's a heap o' gratitude," said Uncle Eben, "dar don't never git proper expression, for de reason dat fatness of de heart is mighty liable to deprive a man of de power of speech."

Waterproof Sieve.
Turn up the edges of a piece of fine wire gauze to form a small sieve. Smoke the gauze on both sides in a candle flame. If water is poured in slowly it will not run through, as its weight is not sufficient to break the film on the lower side. For the same reason the sieve can be floated on water, even if loaded with a considerable weight.—T. L. S.

Stop the Ache.
Zone-therapy is a system of relieving pain by applying pressure to the nerves—like shutting off the water or gas by turning a valve. For instance, to stop toothache, grasp the gums over the aching tooth, between thumb and forefinger. Press tightly! That's worth remembering. "When you've got toothache, everything else in the world seems like unimportance."

History of Opium in China.
Opium for use as a medicine was introduced into China in the Thirteenth century by Arabs. The introduction of opium smoking was not until the seventeenth century and came from India. The first edict prohibiting this was by the Emperor Yung Cheng in 1729.

Famous Irish Regiment.

Perhaps the oldest Irish regiment to have a continuous history is the Eighteenth Regiment of Foot, raised as Lord Forbes' regiment, and brought to England by James II in 1688, when the monarch began to collect Irish troops about him. Upon its colors it bears the harp of Ireland with the motto: "Virtutis Numerus Praeulium," or "The Reward for Valor at Namer." This honor was won in 1693 at Namer, when that regiment won the title of "The Royal Irish Regiment."

The Purpose.

Proportion is almost impossible to human beings. There is no one who does not exaggerate. In conversation, men are encumbered with personality, and talk too much. In modern sculpture, picture and poetry, the beauty is miscellaneous; the artist works here and there and at all points, adding and adding. Instead of unfolding the unit of his thought, beautiful details we must have, or no artist; but they must be means and never other. The eye must not lose sight for a moment of the purpose.—Emerson.

The Philippine waters abound in fish, but fishing is done only in shallow waters, and the catch is not adequate for the demands of the islands. Among the fish available are anchovies, herrings, pompanos, sea bass, mullet, milkfish, barracudas, eels, grunts, parrot fish and soldier fish.

Measurement of Ear Corn.
There seems to be no general standard measurement of ear corn. In some parts of the country the custom is to figure double the quantity of ear corn to that of shelled corn. The standard United States bushel contains 2,148.4 cubic inches. So in measuring ear corn the bushel would be 4,296.8 cubic inches. The weight of a bushel of dry ear corn is seventy pounds in every state except Indiana and Ohio, in which it is sixty-eight pounds, and Mississippi, in which it is seventy-two pounds.

The Savage Pike.
When fishing in Krenshaw pond, Surrey, Miss Shalloo of Aldershot was bitten by a large pike on the leg. Its teeth making deep cuts. "When the monster darted toward me with its mouth open it looked like a shark," said Miss Shalloo, "and I was so frightened when it bit my leg that I had difficulty in shouting for assistance." —London Daily Mail.

In the Span of Life.
Tropical widows of sorts live less than a day—scarcely have felt their sap quicken with the warmth of three thousand springs. Somewhere between these extremes, we open our eyes, look about us for a time, and close them again. Modern political geography and shift of government give us Methusenic feelings; but a glance at rocks or stars sends us shuddering among the other notes, which glister for a moment in the sunlight and then vanish.—William Beebe in the Atlantic Monthly.

Too Bad!
Little Helen, aged six, was taken to her first baseball game. She became quite excited when her father cheered some particular play and waved his arms. Helen followed suit. At the critical stage, in the eighth inning, the batter got to first and then scooted for second, which he managed to reach just in time by a pet-fee slide. Helen was quite distressed, and turning to her mother she said: "Oh, mama, what a pity! The poor fellow didn't make it!" —Boston Transcript.

The World-Wise Vicar.
A cantankerous person told of a vicar who had come to see a some local matter that the vicar was an atheist. "But surely," said the vicar, "you consider the Ten Commandments, broadly speaking, to be excellent rules of life?" "No," said the vicar, "I don't." "Then," said the vicar, "I consider the Ten Commandments to be excellent rules of life." —London Post.

Postponing the Day.
The convent who recently got up at a prayer meeting and thanked the Lord that he had three wives in heaven was (so it is rumored) subsequently observed paying silence at a book-stall for a copy of "How to Prolong Life." —From Eve.

Oldest London Newspaper.
The Morning Post is London's oldest newspaper. On November 2, 1772, Rev. Sir Henry Bate-Dudley edited the first issue. Because of the great number of duels the editor fought, he was known as the Fighting Parson. His successor was also a clergyman.

Bagpipe's Music.
The music of a bagpipe proceeds from three or four pipes. One of these, the chanter, is a primitive pipe with eight holes; the others called drones, sound each one how continuous tone.

The Two Henrys

FREDERICK HART.

It was Henry Bolton's habit, when released from his office by the stroke of half-past twelve, to go to the aquarium in Battery park and watch the seals and sea lions at their noon-day meal. He enjoyed the sight of the sleek creatures playing about in the water; and their carefree abandon took his mind for the moment off the problems of waste and spillage and barges and aprons which occupied his working hours. For Henry Bolton was a rising consulting engineer with a leaning toward hydraulics, and his work kept him thoroughly occupied; so that the moment of relaxation in the aquarium came as a welcome relief.

One hot noon, as he was enjoying the cool drafts of air that played about the tank where the seals were kept, he was startled to hear a feminine voice, very near to him, call out sharply "Henry!" He was the more amazed for his list of girl acquaintances in the city was practically nil. He turned and took off his hat, prepared to see some friend of his from his home town. But the girl beside him, who had just spoken, seemed not to be looking at him. But even as he turned away she called again "Henry! How are you today?"

"I beg your pardon," he began. "But are you calling me?" The girl turned and showed him a face that he was not to forget—a sweet mouth, a nose tilted ever so slightly, and two deep brown eyes—altogether such a face as he had sometimes seen in his dreams.

"You—you called me by name," he stammered, "and I thought—"

She interrupted with a little burst of laughter. "Oh!" she cried when she recovered her breath. "Is your name Henry, too? I was calling to an old friend of mine who knows me—here he comes! Henry!"

Bolton followed her glance and saw a smooth brown seal flop into the water and shoot across the tank with one flip of its tail. He was conscious of embarrassment, and then he saved the situation by laughing with the girl.

"I must confess," he began, "that my name is Henry. And when you called I thought some one I knew was here, so I turned and spoke. I am very fond of that particular seal myself. He went on, as she did not reply. 'I come here every day to see him feed.'"

"So do I," rejoined the girl. Then she glanced at her watch. "Heavens! I must get back!" And before he could say anything more she had gone.

Henry Bolton contemplated the seal for a moment in silence. The animal returned his gaze calmly. "Henry, old man," said Henry Bolton to his namesake, "I think you're very lucky to have such a pretty girlfriend." Then his face clouded.

"Confound it, I may never see her again!" Henry, the seal, looked at Henry, the man, and the man was sure that he saw a solemn wink. "You're right, old boy," said the man, enthusiastically. "She said she came here every day, didn't she? We'll see her again, after all." And he departed for his office, whistling noisily and very much off-key.

He did see her again. The next day she was there and acknowledged his presence with the slightest of nods and smiles. Henry Bolton, undiscouraged, returned her salutation and made no effort to progress further, a fact which pleased the unknown girl. Each day they met at the seal tank, and as it is humanly impossible for two young people to have a common ground of interest without becoming fairly well acquainted it was not long till they knew each other's names.

"Alice Fairwell," said Henry Bolton to himself that evening, as he sat confronting a very important problem that must be done before tomorrow. "That's a pretty name. I like that name—and I like her, too! Well—she meditated a while and returned to the calculations before him.

Their acquaintanceship grew and deepened into warm friendship. They had lunched together several times, and he had taken her to the theater twice. She seemed to enjoy his company, and he frankly took pleasure in hers. He congratulated himself on having found such a friend.

And then, one day in the autumn, she was not at the tank in the aquarium. He waited for an hour, but she did not appear. He thought nothing of it; but when she was absent for four succeeding days he began to wonder, and to be a little worried.

"Where is she, Henry, old man?" he said to the seal. But Henry merely looked solemnly back at him and vouchsafed no answer. A telephone call to her apartment brought only the information that she had left four days ago and left no address. Her office—he had found that she was secretary for a firm near his own office—gave no satisfaction. She was missing—that was all they knew.

Three miserable weeks passed for Henry Bolton, and in that time he came to know that what he had thought friendship was really love—

Highway Improvement

SCIENTIFIC ROAD BUILDING

Test Being Made in Illinois to Determine What Pavement Can Be Used on Highways.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Some time within the next few months a new road 2½ miles long is to be broken up in what is probably the most extensive study of road service ever undertaken in the United States. The road is located in Illinois, about 12 miles southwest of Springfield, and parallels the Walsh railroad. In the test road there are no curves. The grades vary from zero to four-tenths of 1 per cent, with an average grade of one-tenth of 1 per cent, the maximum and minimum grades extending over very short distances. The subgrade soil is uniformly a brown silt loam, except for two small stretches where it more nearly approaches gumbo.

There are seven general types of paving in the road, the idea being to have represented the chief materials used in road making, so that engineers may study the effect of known and measured traffic of varying degree upon each kind of road. The seven types are:

1. Three and four inch bituminous concrete.

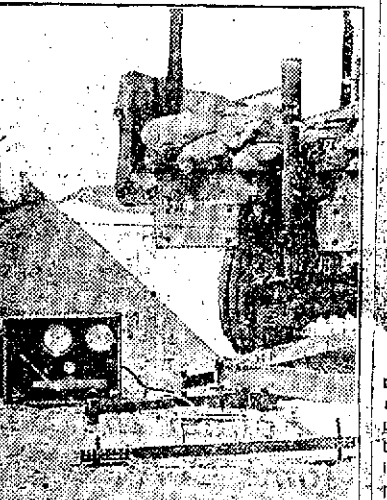

2. Three and four inch brick constructed monolithic and with a Portland cement concrete base.

3. Three and four inch bituminous filled lug and lugless brick on Portland cement concrete base.

4. Three and four inch bituminous filled lug and lugless brick on macadam base.

5. Asphaltic concrete with and without binder course on macadam base.

The road, known as the Bates experimental road, was constructed by the division of highways, Illinois department of public works and buildings, in co-operation with the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture. Actual work was begun on the road in June, 1920, and it was finished some time ago. Since its completion the state and federal government engineers, by numerous daily observations, have been measuring the effect of heat, cold, moisture, and other elements upon its surface and on the subgrade. These observations have been taken on 63 sections, and much information has been obtained which will be valuable in building roads in the future.

This information is of the utmost value. Knowing the conditions of traffic which are to be met, it will afford a means by which a proper paving can be selected to meet those conditions. It may lead to the saving of millions of dollars each year by preventing the construction of pavements that are found to be incapable of resisting modern traffic.

Why some types of pavement fail and others hold up will be largely determined by the test. Why a road cracks also is being studied. At different times each section is observed and all cracks noted. In addition, a considerable number of cracks have been measured by a micrometer.

"The Wonder City."

London radiates from two main points—first, the city of London, the center of which is the Royal exchange, and the Bank of England; the city of London, the birthplace of the commercial life of the Anglo-Saxon race, and still the greatest financial and commercial city in the world; and, second, Westminster, the center of which is the houses of parliament—the birthplace of free institutions which have been followed in every part of the globe.—From Editor and Publisher, New York.

Degrees of Affection.

Alton, who had gone to visit some relatives, developed a severe case of homesickness, and, when asked if she didn't like her cousins, she replied: "Yes, I like them, but not as well as home-grown folks."

A Remarkable Coincidence.

GOOD HIGHWAYS

ROADS CONSTRUCTED IN 1921

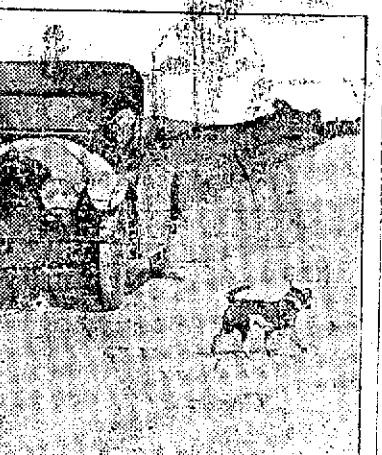

Approximately 28,000 Miles Built During Year Just Passed—Materials Lower.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Road building has recovered from the setback received during the war, and prospects are bright for the future. Approximately 28,000 miles of road were constructed during the present season by the states in conjunction with federal aid, according to the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture, and probably an equal amount independent of federal aid. More miles of improved road were built than during any other year since 1914.

Costs of road grading and construction with local materials is down practically to the 1914 level. Some reductions, also, have been made in freight rates for road materials. The importance of this item is shown by the fact that in some cases it has been estimated that increased freight rates have added 10 per cent to the cost of a road. Prices of manufactured road materials, however, the present level is still well below that of a year ago.

With the new appropriation by congress of $75,000,000, added impetus will be given to new road construction. Many of the states are considering enlarge amounts of state aid, and the new law will have a tendency to encourage this policy. It will also increase the construction of a system of interstate and intercity highways, rather than the present situation of roads as in some cases in the past.

The Paper From Truck Patch.

Salisbury is a vegetable which is not very highly esteemed, though it is a great deal to recommend it. It grows profusely in almost any part of this country, wherever planted. It has been recently discovered by some experienced farmers in a similar soil in Virginia. While the stalks and leaves of the plant are capable of making a very superior paper resembling the parchment made by the Japanese.

Adventures with the Iron Horse and the Gleaming Rails! An Epic of Railroad-riding and the Romance of Big Business!

The Wreckers

By FRANCIS LYNDE

The author was a railroad man for many years—he writes from the inside. Reading this captivating story you will feel all the thrills of a personal participant in its episodes—smashing adventures, gun fights, train wrecks, battles of wits between industrial giants—and an enthralling romance involving a big-brained, big-bosomed, far-seeing executive (who believed in taking public and employees into partnership with his railroad) and an unusual woman who possessed keenness, intuition, strategy and the female qualities necessary to make her a perfect complement to the man.

"The Wreckers" Will Appear as a Serial in these Columns

Do Not Miss It!

This Story will start in The Progress soon.

Asks $100,000

Mrs. Alma C. Smythe has sued Leighton Taylor, secretary of the late Senator Boies Penrose for $100,000. She alleges Taylor kissed her. Taylor denies it.

Get After What You Want.

It is no use just stalling down and waiting for things to happen. Life is "round the corner" and you've got to run after it, and run fast, too, with your head up and your mind alert. Wishes are all very well, but they must not master you. You've got to master them. Long years, desire, as much as you like, it is a good sign, but, oh, don't put your wishbone in the place where your backbone ought to be.—Examiner.

S.S. McCLURE RETURNS TO EDITORIAL CHAIR

S.S. McCLURE

S. S. McCLURE, discoverer of the newspaper syndicate and one of America's great magazine editors— Cyrus H. Curtis and Frank A. Munsey being the others—has returned to the editorial chair of McClure's after a few years spent in the newspaper and lecture field and in world travel. Mr. McClure believes a magazine should "mirror life." If he mirrors the movie colony at Hollywood and the sordid secrets of prohibition "enforcement" in large cities as pitilessly as he had Ida M. Bell mirror Standard Oil's history, there will be much squinting in film and political circles.

An Egg Mystery.

If you want to mystify your friends, show them how you can get an egg into a bottle the mouth of which appears to be far too narrow for the purpose. It can be done by soaking the egg in a strong solution of sweet acid and water. The egg becomes soft and can be pressed into any shape. When it falls into the water in the bottle it will harden again.—The Bits.

To Remove Panes of Glass.

Remove panes of glass by laying soft soap over the putty which holds them. In a few hours the putty will be soft and the glass easily removed.

The Start of Divorce.

The most primitive people held that a husband could repudiate his wife at will. This was gradually modified in some cases to the obtaining of a divorce. The hearing of cases came to be a function of the courts.

High Seas.

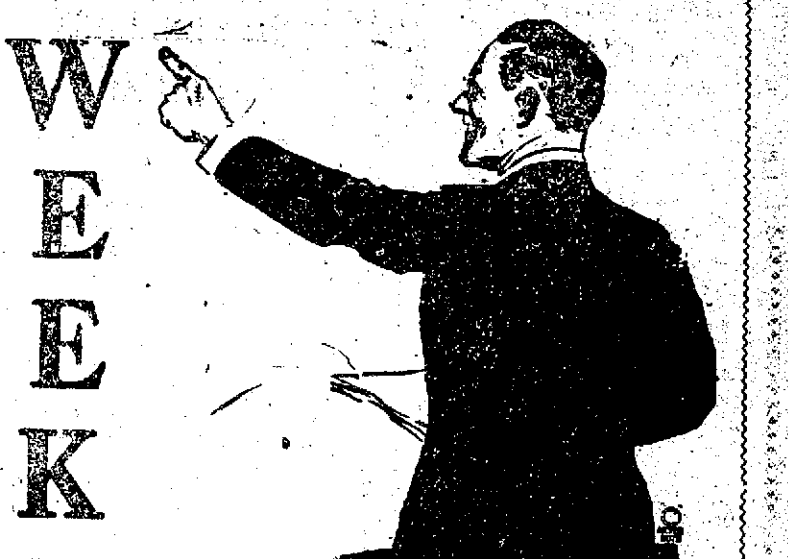

The term "high seas" is the open sea or ocean. The claims of various nations to exclusive rights and control over extensive tracts of the ocean highways have been settled after much controversy by a general international law. The principle now accepted is that the jurisdiction of maritime states extends only for three miles of their own coasts; the remainder of the seas being high seas, accessible on equal terms to all nations. Inland seas and estuaries, of course, are excepted.

THE LEGION IS HIS HOBBY

Former National Vice Commander
Also Devotes Much Attention to Labor Affairs.

Time does not hang heavily for George L. Berry, president since 1907 of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America, founder of Pressmen's Home, Tenn., and until recently national vice commander of the American Legion.

Mr. Berry has two hobbies: his union and his Legion. A veteran of the Spanish-American war, he served overseas in the World war with the railroad transportation corps. He was in Paris, France, when the first caucus of service men, out of which grew the American Legion, was held, and he attended and was heard from. Being familiar with foreign industrial conditions, he represented the American Federation of Labor at foreign trade union conferences, and after the war was appointed to the government industrial commission sent to allied nations to co-ordinate industrial conditions with those of the United States. His Legion activities now concern themselves with his role as a national speaker for the service organization.

LEGION MAN SAVES LIVES

Former Yeoman, Member of New Jersey Post, Aids When Town is in Danger.

A post-war gas attack which threatened the entire town of Round Brook, N. J., was checked and limited by quick and fearless action of M. L. Berry, former yeoman of an American torpedo boat destroyer and member of the local American Legion post.

When a huge tank containing 1,000 pounds of phosgene, one of the deadliest gases used in the war, sprung a leak, a workman was killed and scores were overcome before Pascal and a companion, formerly with the chemical warfare service, arrived. They smothered the gas from a distance, and recognizing its odor, set out for the origin.

Arriving, Pascal found doctors caring for the severely gassed workmen running about in gas masks but no one trying to stop the leak. After several attempts in the gas-filled plant, Pascal and his companion stopped the flow. Both have been honored by the town council and recommended for Carnegie medals.

FRENCH MEDALS FOR YANKS

Special Commemorative Emblem to Be Presented to All Americans Who Served.

All Americans who served overseas as members of units of the French command during the World war are to receive a handsome decoration from the French government, to be known as the French commemorative medal. Distribution will be made from the office of the French military attaché at Washington. It is estimated that from ten to fifteen thousand Americans are entitled to the medal. Since they are scattered all over the country, the French government has appointed to the more than eleven thousand posts of the American Legion to publish the news of the medal offer to eligible veterans.

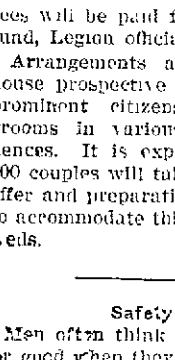

The medals are to go to all American citizens who served during the World war, as members of the French army and navy; as physicians, nurses, pharmacists or administrators in French sanitary units between August 2, 1914, and November 11, 1918; as members of relief agencies under French command, and as motor drivers, operators and secretaries in the regular organizations of the French armies.

TIE KNOTS WITHOUT CHARGE

Legion's National Chaplain Agrees to Officiate at National Conventions Events.

Because he believes that married members of the American Legion make better citizens, Rev. John W. Inzer, Nashville, Tenn., the Legion's national chaplain, will marry without charge all Legionnaires who attend the third annual convention of the service organization at Kansas City this fall. All marriage license fees will be paid from the convention fund, Legion officials promise.

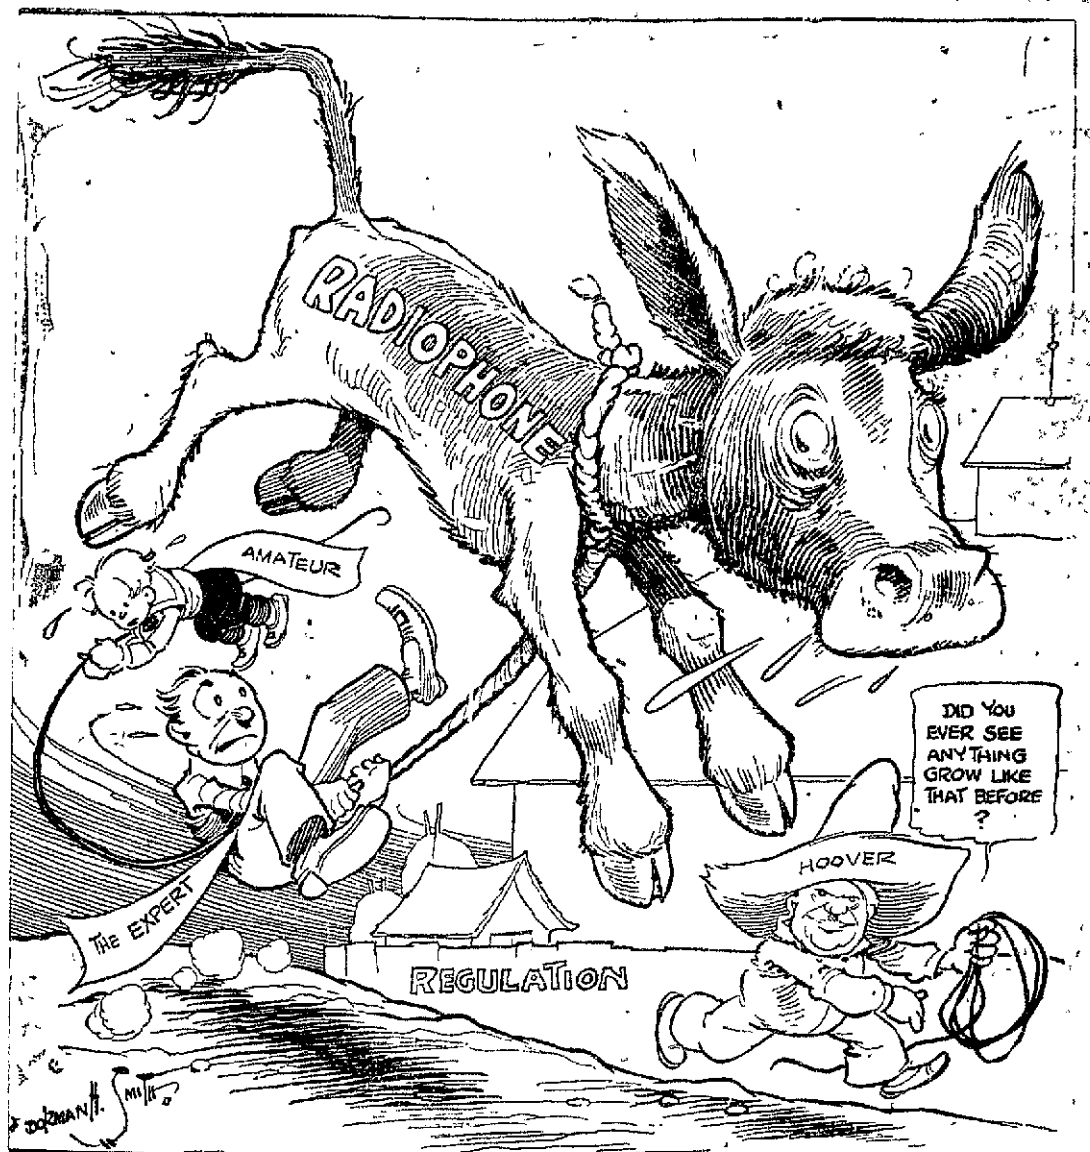

Arrangements are being made to house prospective brides in homes of prominent citizens and the bridegrooms in various hotels and residences. It is expected that at least 100 couples will take advantage of the offer and preparations are being made to accommodate that number of newly-weds.

Safety First.

Men often think they have reformed for good when they are merely waiting for the fumes to blow over.

SEND FOR BILL WRIGLEY!

SIGNED BY DETROIT SCOUTS

Sol Robinson, the fastest baseball player this section has produced, has been signed for the coming season by Billy Doyle, scout for Ty Cobb's Detroit Tigers, who grabbed up the local boy largely on the recommendation of Harry Seigfried, who played second base for Clearfield last season.

"Solly" has been "farmed" out to Mike Mowery's Chambersburg team in the Blue Ridge League his signed contract going in last week and is now awaiting orders to report for spring practice.

The First Iron Boat?

The first iron boat was built at Faslane, a little village near Glasgow, and piloted for many a day on the Forth and Clyde canal between Port Dundas and Kirkcaldy. Previous to the launch, many were in doubt whether it would float or not, and a good deal of betting took place. An old woman who was paring potatoes at the side of the canal undertook to prove the point at issue at once, and thereupon pushed her iron pot with the potatoes in it into the water. It floated!

Efficiency.

It is a convenience when making preserves, after they are put away in a closet, to make a list of what you have and fasten it on the closet door with a pencil attached; then when you take a jar out cross it off.

Yearly Coal Production.

It is reported that about 65,000 pounds of coral, worth $700,000 are taken each year from the coral beds of Japan. The work is done by divers, the master diver receiving and grading the coral as it is brought in. Wholesale and exporting firms keep representatives there to inspect the coral and make bids for it. The coral has much to do with the value. The most expensive is "boke," a pale quince color; next in value is pink, then white, light red and dark red.

Working of True Love.

Put a seal upon your lips, and forget what you have done. After you have been kind, after love has stolen forth into the world and done its beautiful work, go back into the shade again and say nothing about it. Love hides even from itself.—Professor Drummond.

WELL POSTED LEGION MAN

Commander of Department of New Mexico. Knows About Professions Presented in Membership.

In his brief career as a farmer, trapper, dynamite worker, oil field worker, motion picture operator, bookkeeper and lawyer, J. W. Chapman, Gallup, New Mexico, came well qualified to his present post as commander of the state's department of the American Legion. He knows a little about every profession represented in the state's membership.

Covering all of the United States and most of Mexico in his travels, Mr. Chapman settled down to the practice of law in New Mexico just before America entered the World war. When she did, he volunteered as a mechanic and chauffeur and spent two months in an army motor shop. Then he was transferred to a balloon school, but before he could get acquainted with the blimps, they moved him again. This time to the company's personnel headquarters. He was in an officers' training camp when the armistice came.

Entering Legion work early, Mr. Chapman was a member of the committee which wrote the non-political clause into the organization's constitution. He boils down his biography to this: "I am a member of the A. F. & A. M., B. P. O. E., and K. of P. I am an American by birth, training and inclination; an Episcopalian by faith and a prohibitionist by law. I sing, dance, play the piano and am married. What else could I ask?"

TITLES OF SOME NOTABLES

General Douglas Haig, "Earl and Field Marshal"; Beatty, "Admiral of the Fleet."

Decorations and titles won by distinguished British and Canadian guests at the third annual convention of the American Legion in Kansas City, October 31, November 1 and 2, are testimony of their notable records during the World war.

General Douglas Haig bears the titles of earl and field marshal and has the right to use the following letters, indicating decorations, after his name: "K. T. G. C. B. O. M. G. C. V. O., K. C. I. E."

Admiral Beatty's official designation is "Admiral of the Fleet, the Right Honorable Earl Beatty, G. C. B., O. M., G. C. V. O., D. S. O."

The correct manner to address the commander of the Canadian corps in France is "Gen. Sir William Currie, G. C. M. G., K. C. B., K. C. M. G., C. B., Principal of McGill university."

The participation of Great Britain and her dominions in President Harding's world conference on disarmament is believed by national convention officials to remove all doubts in regard to the presence of the distinguished guests at the Legion national convention.

SWALE WAS A DISHWASHER

Commander of Legion's Washington Department Licked Kitchen Boss, Then Took His Job.

The story of how a fist fight made him a dish washer is told by Thomas W. Swale, commander of the American Legion's department of the state of Washington.

While the down-trodden bookkeeper of a Great Northern construction gang, Swale was cajoled into an encounter with the gang's bully, who held the rank of camp cleanser of the pots and pans. The fight became rough, the bookkeeper knocked out the dish washer and the foreman forthwith made up for lack of personnel by assigning Swale to wash the dishes until the beaten kitchen mechanic could return from the hospital.

After gaining an education, Swale, at twenty-three years and 200 pounds, was the "baby" of the Washington legislature, serving for two terms. During the war he served in the army intelligence section in charge of I. W. W. investigations in the Pacific Northwest. He is a practicing lawyer in Seattle, Wash.

The Verb Salvage.

The verb "to salvage" did not pass out of existence with the disbanding of the A. E. F. Its synonym, "to manage," is still recognized as part of the language of Legionnaires. George R. Anderson post of the American Legion at Ardmore, Okla., recently "salvaged" a library of 2,000 volumes. As in the army days when anything from a mess kit to a five-ton truck might have been acquired mysteriously with the simple explanation "we managed for it" or the equally expressive "we salvaged it," the post acquired the library. During the war the people of Ardmore had collected a large number of books to be shipped to army camps for use of soldiers. But after the volumes were collected and boxed they were never shipped. They were discovered recently in a store-room by a member of the Legion post and it did not take long to salvage them.

"That office boy gets on my nerves." "Why so? He doesn't whistle." "There you are! Why doesn't he? That's what I want to know,"—Toledo Blade.

FULLERTON-PATERSON

Miss Aldene Fullerton, formerly of Curwensville and Richard S. Paterson, of Philadelphia, were united in marriage at Harrisburg by Rev. G. E. Hawes, minister of the Market Square Presbyterian church yesterday. After the ring ceremony had been performed the wedding dinner was served at the Penn Harris hotel. After a brief honeymoon they will be at home in Philadelphia, Pa.

Francis Lynde

This writer of great railroad stories was a railroader in the Rocky Mountains country until he was 37 years of age. Then he took his pen in hand to write big romances about the life he had witnessed and lived. During the first five years he had no conspicuous success, but in 1898 destiny reshaped the point of his fountain pen and he wrote three novels within twelve months. Each of the three was a best-seller. Then the 25-cent and 35-cent magazines began to bid for his work and the little old 10-cent and 15-cent monthlies that had kept his pen boiling were deserted. During the past 20 years he has written 17 successful novels. Readers of this paper will have an opportunity to read his latest, probably his greatest story, "The Trackers," as a serial. Watch for it!

This Story will start in The Progress soon.

Squaring the Circles.

It is not bad fun to ask an irritable person to construct a perfect square with four pennies. Probably he will make what he calls a "square" with them by placing them flat on the table with their edges touching, when you point out at once that this is not a true square. Having made the irritable person very peevish, explain to him how the square is made by placing the coins so that the lines about the date on each penny join. You may conclude by offering to let him eat the "dates" on the pennies.—Tit-Bits.

ARE YOU SURE YOUR CHILDREN'S EYES ARE RIGHT
Remember that poor eyesight means poor concentration and will retard the youngster's progress.
Many a child considered dull or lazy in school or music studies has simply been suffering from defective vision. And often correct glasses have changed entirely the record of performance.
Perhaps your youngster's report card is reflecting the presence of eye-strain. Perhaps you are not doing your own child full justice. Have an examination made and KNOW.
